A friend in need is a friend indeed

It is hard to discuss that friendship is an important part of our life. Each of us wants to have a good friend. But who is a real friend? How to become one? The criteria differ so much that finding answers become an impossible mission. That's why I want to tell you my funny short story, which might help you to understand how real friendship can look like.

Early morning. It's 7:40 AM, Saturday. I've got a picture of fresh-baked pancakes from my friend Lera and am hungry. I said her, that ~~it's crime~~ sending photos of food to a starving me is a crime. "Starving?" - the only thing she typed before going offline.

Thirty minutes⁴ later I forgot about pancakes. ~~It's~~ It's 8 o'clock and almost every human creature is sleeping. And here I hear someone knocking on my door. This someone was Lera - her blondy hair were messy, but her blue eyes were so bright. I've understood that here has come the help for starving me - Lera brought her homemade pancakes. You might say that the story isn't serious enough to be an example of a real friendship. "Life itself sometimes isn't serious enough" - I'd say.
